Important note about the Endnote X9.3.1 update. This update has been rolled out across WA Health computers now and it’s important to note that this version IS NOT BACKWARDS COMPATIBLE. That means, once you have opened or created a library in this new version, the library will not be able to be opened in any older versions you may still have on a computer at home. You will need to update your home version as well.

Remember to uninstall any previous versions (after saving a copy of your library and accompanying files on an external drive), then click here to get a copy of the new installation files. Please contact the library for more information or for any assistance.

Updates to the Medical Library Website

The Research Tips guide has been revamped and is now called Research. The new Research page provides advice and support on:

- Finding the literature
- Evidence-based practice
- Systematic reviews
- Research support including where to publish and how to maximise your research impact
The Medical Library website also features a News tab to keep you up to date with information about new resources, changes and technical updates.

In January 2020 the following subject guides were retired: Allied health; Midwifery and Nursing; Neonatology; Obstetrics and Gynaecology; Pharmacology; Women’s psychological health

All resources in these guides can be accessed from other pages on the Medical Library website. If you need help finding resources or information, please contact the Library on 6458 1499 or KEMH.Library@health.wa.gov.au
